Dividend ! Dividend !! Dividend !!! "BNP Paribas Dividend Yield"

Dividend yield is a way to measure how much cash flow you are getting for each rupee invested. Investors who require a minimum stream of cash flow from their investment portfolio can secure this cash flow by investing in funds paying stable dividends. The combination of a consistent dividend with an increasing value of fund can offer powerful earnings potential.

$$= \frac{\text{Annual dividends per share}}{\text{Price per share}}$$

Price per share

Dividend yield is one of the parameter and not the only parameter to determine a suitable fund. First and foremost, look at the funds dividend history. Funds that have a solid track record of stable or rising dividends payments are preferable. Funds with erratic dividend payment histories cannot be relied upon to provide the safety buffer you are looking for. The quality of companies in the portfolio also needs to be kept in mind.

Investor benefits:

1. Dividend-paying funds, investors can be reasonably certain they may receive dividend income on a regular basis for as long as they hold their units. Therefore, investors tend to rely on dividends in much the same way that they rely on interest payments from corporate bonds and debentures.
2. Dividend-paying stocks tend to exhibit pricing characteristics that are moderately different from those of growth stocks. This is because they provide regular income, similar to a bond, but still provide investors with the potential to benefit from share price appreciation if the company does well.
3. Investors looking for exposure to the growth potential of the equity market, combined with the safety of the (moderately) fixed income provided by dividends, should consider adding funds with high dividend yields to their portfolio. Many investors particularly those nearing retirement like a dividend, both for the income and the security it provides.
